The couple started the ranch after they adopted two horses, Remy and Ruby, who had been abused and neglected. The Johnsons were inspired by the horses' resilience and determination, and they wanted to help other horses who had suffered similar fates.

Today, Remy And Ruby Rescue Ranch is home to over 50 horses, all of whom have been rescued from situations of abuse, neglect, or abandonment. The horses come to the ranch with a variety of physical and emotional issues, but the ranch staff provides them with the care and support they need to heal and thrive.

The ranch's equine-assisted therapy programs are designed to help veterans, children with disabilities, and other individuals in need to overcome physical, emotional, and cognitive challenges. The programs are led by certified equine-assisted therapy instructors, and they provide participants with the opportunity to interact with horses in a safe and controlled environment.

The horses at Remy And Ruby Rescue Ranch have a profound impact on the lives of the people who come to the ranch. For veterans, the horses can help to reduce stress, anxiety, and depression. For children with disabilities, the horses can help to improve motor skills, communication skills, and self-confidence. And for all who come to the ranch, the horses can provide a sense of peace, hope, and belonging.

Remy And Ruby Rescue Ranch is a special place where horses and humans come together to heal and grow. The ranch is a testament to the power of love, compassion, and hope, and it is a place where miracles happen every day.
